Life in Chile
Welcome to Santiago! We know you must be excited about beginning your adventure in Chile's capital and eager to prepare for your arrival. We have put together some basic health information and tips to help you stay healthy and safe during your semester here, and to ensure that you have the best study abroad experience possible.

• Water: The tap water in Chile is potable, but like in any other country, it may take time to acclimate your body to the different levels of chlorine and other chemicals that they use to clean it. We suggest that you start with drinking only bottled water and slowly introduce the tap water.

• Fruits and vegetables: Fresh produce is abundant and cheaply available all-year round in Santiago. Even for home-grown produce, we advise adding a capful of chlorine to a bowl of water, or combine 1 part vinegar to three parts water to wash the dust and pollution off any fresh vegetables before you eat them.

• Mobile phones: Nearly all Chileans have cell phones, and pre-paid phones are both efficient and affordable. They can be bought in most Malls, large supermarkets and company stores. The three main telephone companies are Entel, Movistar and Claro. Entel has an emergency feature that allows you to borrow money to make a call, or send an emergency text message to another number requesting they call you, if necessary. Other companies may have similar features so do ask when you are shopping.

• Street food: Food vendors can be found on most street corners and in the ferias, or markets, but it is generally not advisable to consume food or drinks sold on the street.

• Street safety: In Santiago, like in any big city, it is important to be aware of your valuables. Be careful about using your phone or other electronic devices in the street and always have a firm grip on your bag and backpack.
While on the metro, especially during rush hour, be sure to carry your backpack in front of you and to ensure all pockets are well closed. Mobile phones and other electronics should be put away securely, not in the outside pockets of your coat, bag or backpack.

In general it would be best to leave your more flashy jewelry and accessories at home when spending the day in the street or in certain neighborhoods.

While eating at a restaurant, especially if it is an outside patio, be sure to leave your bags and backpacks tied to the chair next to you or firmly in between your legs.

In the event that you are pick-pocketed, please go to the nearest Comisaría de Carabineros (Police Station) or Retén Móvil (Mobile Police Station) to report the incident. The nearest Comisaría to FEN is located in the Baquedano Metro Station. There is always a Retén Móvil in Plaza de Armas, and in the Plaza Italia of the Baquedano Metro Station. A Retén Móvil looks like this, and is able to carry out the functions of a normal police station:

!Retén Móvil

- Emergencies: In case of emergencies, go to your nearest hospital (see section on Hospital Locations) or local Health Care Center (consultorio). Request receipts if you plan to be excused from classes, or get reimbursed by your insurance company.
There are different kinds of living arrangements for which we provide contacts in this Guide: Host Families, Shared Apartments (Departamentos compartidos), Residencies/Boarding Houses (Residencias), and Rooms (Habitaciones). The following pages contain the housing details and contact information for each house/apartment situation available.

Between these contacts and the list of housing websites on the next page, you should have no trouble in finding housing either before you arrive in Santiago, or when you arrive in person.
